

TRANSAT'S ENVIRONMENTAL POLICY

As part of a comprehensive approach toward sustainable tourism development, Transat intends to recognize the environmental issues related to its activities and to the travel industry, and is committed to reducing the negative impacts of its activities on the environment and to taking measures to encourage its employees, customers and partners to do the same.

While the travel industry has an interest in environmental stewardship in general, immediate and continuous attention is required to deal with the especially important issues of conserving biodiversity, fighting climate change, protecting water and marine ecosystems, and preventing tourism-related pollution.

Transat intends to take measures to enhance its performance and that of the industry through means including the commitment of its employees, co-operation with its partners, and raising awareness among stakeholders and travellers.

Transat intends and endeavours to:

1. Respect environmental protection regulations and, where possible, exceed the requirements.
2. Understand, analyze, measure and minimize the environmental impacts of its activities.
3. Establish an environmental management system with clear targets for enhancing performance.
4. Reduce or optimize resource use and fight waste.
5. Prevent and reduce sources of pollution and garbage.
6. Promote its environmental policy and encourage responsible individual behaviour among its employees and customers.
7. Urge suppliers of tourism services to commit themselves to continuous improvement of environmental performance.
8. Promote eco-responsible products and services without sacrificing quality or performance.
9. Co-operate with efforts by governments, businesses, non-governmental organizations and industrial associations in favour of environmental stewardship.
10. Communicate its environmental goals, projects and progress in an open and honest way.
